A separate dining hall wing is connected to the rear (west) facade. The building is linked to Richmond Hall to the south by an arched passageway. Designed by Parker, Thomas and Rice. The building was named for Dr. McFadden Alexander Newell, a native of Londonderry, who was the first principal of the State Normal School when it was established in Baltimore City in 1866. The building was connected to the earlier buildings by underground tunnels. Part of the Parker, Thomas and Rice basic plan.

Originally built as a model elementary school. Designed by Smith and May, architects. The east facade retains its classical character; some rear (west) windows have been bricked up and the north end has been reworked with contemporary plate-glass additions. Named for the Rev. Libertus Van Bokkelen, former rector of St. Timothy's Church, Catonsville, and first State Superintendent of Public Instruction (under the constitution of 1864-1867).
